~ On the Morning ~

On the morning that I don't wake up
Will be the night I won't go to sleep
My soul will be free
Watching everything, moving everywhere

The stage for the final performance,
And you, all of you,
Who say you know me well,
Will discover that only God knows me.

So on the morning that I don't wake up
Will be the night that I don't go to sleep
My soul will be smiling,
Dancing spiritually, clapping happily

The premier and only show begins,
And you, all of you,
Share your script, the audience waiting to hear,
But only God knows my heart.

So on the morning that I don't wake up
Will be the night that I don't go to sleep.
My soul will be calling,
Singing heavenly, shouting joyously.

As all the performances are given
They end, and you, all of you Walk by to give a hug, a kiss or a handshake and kind words.

Only God keeps me,
So on the morning that I don't wake up
Will be the night that I went to be with my heavenly Father forever.

Mother,

Let my soul be quieted within me, O Lord,
For my precious mother has just fallen asleep;
Let me rejoice at the victory
That her spirit and soul is still living
--Awaiting for her glorified body which will live forever!

Yes, Lord, I grieve at the loss of my mother
Who was such a big part of my life;
And I know You expect me to go through this grieving process inthe midst of this underlining joy
That she is with You and is no longer suffering.

She was quite a mother!
In addition to doing what regular moms do When she saw I was getting bored from no one to play with, she took time from her busy schedule Taught me how to braid hair and cook.

What a great mom she was!
Maybe I am prejudice,
But, I know my mom was the best mother who has ever lived! Thank You, Lord, my God, for giving her to me! I am so proud to be her daughter!
Thank You, Lord, for letting me
See her one last time

Before she went home to be with You,
She strengthened my faith to the reality of heaven
As she was aglow with the joyous expectancy
Of her eternal home.

I held her hand that had gotten very thin
Like the rest of her body,
But she sighed and winked at me
As she took her last breathe, I imagined she was saying, "It's okay, my daughter; it's okay."
Her wink meant so much to me!
With her glowing, radiant spirit,
I now realize she was simply an Overjoyed bride.
